

Using Arc Transforms to Understand Transits

If you have a slow-moving transit that will affect your chart for a while, then you can also arc transforms to help you arrive at a deeper understanding of what that transit means for you.

For example, on May 31st, 2023, transiting Uranus will be exactly conjunct my Ascendant. YIKES!

That could be a little disruptive to say the least!

However, one way to understand what this might mean for me is to look at the Uranus/Ascendant arc transform of my natal chart. This chart will show specifically who I will be when I combine Uranus with my Ascendant.

At first glance I see a grand trine and lots of sextiles. Plus, I like the fact that Uranus is in Pisces. Hence, maybe Uranus conjunct my Ascendant won't be so bad after all!

Also, the Uranus/North Node/Saturn grand trine suggests that this conjunction may enhance my professional status (North Node in 10th house in my natal chart) and it will be assisted by my knowledge and discipline (Saturn in 9th house).

Also, a second grand trine promises a strong mind and body (Moon conjunct Mars conjunct 3rd house), transcendence with help from others (Moon trine Chiron conjunct 7th house), and assistance from past friends (Moon trine South Node conjunct 11th house).

There is a grand cross involving Uranus, Sun, Chiron, and Pluto (with a wide orb) that will put some pressure on me, but the trines and sextiles in this chart will provide lots of support. However, with Mars in its detriment and conjunct my Moon, I'll also keep an eye on my blood pressure.

All in all while this transit from Uranus may turn my life upside down, it also holds a lot of promise for personal growth and transcendence. Hence, as I get closer to this date, I'll use this chart as a guide to what to expect and how to best respond!

But at the same time, don't forget that the transits to your birth chart will also have their affect upon you. For instance, Uranus square Pluto, Pluto conjunct Midheaven, Mars square Jupiter, Jupiter opposite Mars. OY GEVALT!
